memory (referred to as a DRAM hereinafter) device which is capable of reducing the area occupied by a peripheral circuit such as a sense amplifier and for thereby miniaturizing the chip. 2. Description of the Prior Art As the integration density of the DRAM has recently increased, a sense amplifier disposed on the chip becomes huge. In order to reduce the area occupied by such a sense amplifier, there has been employed a bit line as short as possible and a CMOS-type sense amplifier.
