Iranian Jews History of Iranian Jews From the Persian Empire to modern day Iran, Jews have been in the Middle East for over 3,000 years. Iran has the oldest record of Jewish existence. While the Persians are recorded as having exiled the Jews out of the region in the 5th century BCE, in the 18th century CE, Parsis, also known as Persian Zoroastrians, discovered a record of a Jewish presence in their region. The Parsis were responsible for many of the current recorded Jewish communities in modern-day Iran and are the region's only ethnic Persian Jews. Since the close of World War II, Jews have formed the majority of Iran's Jewish population. Population of Iran's Jews Iran's Jewish population is the largest in the Middle East. Estimates of Iran's Jewish population range from 500,000 to 1,500,000. The vast majority of Iranian Jews are Persians. The other most prevalent ethnic groups are: Armenians (20,000), Takikis (15,000), Luris (14,000), Kurds (12,000), and Turks (10,000). Although in the last century, the Jewish population has declined, the Jewish community has continued to grow since the 1950s as a result of immigration from Israel, increased marriage between Jews and Persians, and conversion to Judaism. There are an estimated 4,000 Jews in Israel and since the Jewish exodus from Iran in the early part of the 20th century, Israel has become the sole destination for Iranian Jews. Today, most Iranian Jews belong to the Sephardic tradition. However, there are also communities of Persian Jews who observe the Shī'a, a heterodox form of Shia Islam. During the 20th century, many Iranian Jews converted to Christianity, mainly as a result of persecution by the regime. Iranian Jews today Since the end of the 1980s, Iranian Jews have made important contributions to Iran's intellectual community. They have also continued their traditional academic pursuits of writing, poetry, and painting. While there are no Jews who hold public office in Iran, many have become members of parliament, and others have held high-ranking positions in government and the intelligence service. Most Iranian Jews continue to identify as Persian Jews, and a sizable percentage of Iranian Jews
