We have shown that human dendritic cells (DCs) had been significantly increased in gastric cancer cell lines (GC cells) and GC tissues. The B cell stimulating factor-1 (BSF-1) induces DCs from their immature to a mature state and also induces the DC maturation marker CCR7 in vitro. The aim of our study is to examine the relationship between BSF-1 expression and prognosis in GC patients. The clinical data were obtained from the Cancer Hospital, Sun Yat-sen University, and Sun Yat-sen University Cancer Center. We found that the expression of BSF-1 in the GC tissues was correlated with the differentiation degree of GC, tumor-node-metastasis stage, invasion depth, and lymph node metastasis status. In addition, the Kaplan-Meier survival analyses revealed that the low expression of BSF-1 correlated with a poor overall survival in GC. Furthermore, the Kaplan-Meier survival analyses indicated that the expression of BSF-1 had an influence on the survival of the patients, and the subgroup analyses showed that BSF-1 expression could predict poor survival in patients with early stages of GC, and in the patients with lymph node metastasis. In conclusion, our study may shed light on a new mechanism of immunologic escape in GC, and may provide a novel target for the treatment of GC
